His Holiness, Pope Francis has accepted the resignation of His Beatitude Patriarch Gregorios III Laham, effective today, 6 May 2017. Archbishop Jean-Clement Jeanbart, Archbishop of Aleppo, has been named Administrator of the Melkite Greek Catholic Church until a successor can be elected by the Holy Synod.

Deaconesses in the Church When we hear the term “deacon” we think of the sacred minister in our own day with his extensive role in the Liturgy In fact, diakonos is simply the Greek word for a servant such as a waiter or messenger. In the early Church, the deacon’s first role was that described in Acts 6: distributing food to the poor, leaving the apostles free to devote themselves “to prayer and to the ministry of the word” (Acts 6:4). St Paul uses the same term to refer to certain women in his communities such as Phoebe (Rom 16:1), whom he says has been a help to many. Writing to the Philippians he mentions two women, Euodia and Syntyche, and asks his readers to help these women “who labored with me in the gospel” (Phil 4:2). In AD 112 the Roman governor Pliny the Younger wrote to the Emperor Trajan concerning Christians in his province, Bithynia. He had questioned two ministrae (“female slaves” or “maidservants”) called deaconesses, he wrote, but does not describe their role in the community. We first see specific roles of deaconesses in the Didaskalia. Their duties include: Visiting Women in Their Homes –“There are houses to which you cannot send a deacon to the women, on account of the heathen, but may send a deaconess... to visit those who are sick, and to minister to their needs, and to bathe those who have begun to recover from sickness;” Assisting in Baptisms of Women – “Also, because in many other matters the office of a woman deacon is required. The Fourth-century Syrian book of Church order, the Apostolic Constitutions, Book II, adds “And when she who is being baptized has come up from the water, let the deaconess receive her, and teach and instruct her how the seal of baptism ought to be (kept) unbroken in purity and holiness. For this cause we say that the ministry of a woman deacon is especially needful and important.”

On June 3, Saturday of the Dead, we will have a Memorial Service offered by all the Eastern Catholic Churches of Phoenix, in English, Arabic, Chaldean and Slavic languages. This Service is to pray for all our Dead Parishioners, Relatives and Friends and will take place at our Eastern Catholic Cemetery at Holy Redeemer.
